

DANIEL FAMED AS LEGAL WRITER

Virginia's Senator Author of Standard Treatise on Negotiable Instruments.

"As great as was Senator Daniel as a statesman and publicist, he was no less great as a lawyer," said a member of the Richmond bar yesterday. "So much has been written since his death about his work in the Senate that his legal fame has been overshadowed to a certain extent. His legal treatise on negotiable instruments had been declared by competent authority to be 'the greatest work on the law of bills and notes ever written in the English language.'"

"One who edited a late edition of this great law book says that the writing of it by Senator Daniel was more or less accidental. The story goes that young Daniel, having entered the law school of the University of Virginia after a brilliant record as a major in the Confederate Army, made excellent progress in his legal studies, except in the subject of negotiable instruments. It is said that he failed on his examination in that branch. That failure made him determine to master the subject when he had left college."

"After securing a sheepskin from the university, Mr. Daniel began a systematic study of the law of negotiable instruments, a part of the law which bears little analogy to the other branches of the law and is really a mass of queer and illogical exceptions to the rule."

"He made many notes as an aid to memory on a dissection. Some time later he thought that it might be a good idea to rearrange his notes and publish them, and he did so. The book attracted much attention from the legal profession, and both in England and the United States, 'Daniel on Negotiable Instruments' is the authority, ranking as a peer of that other great law book written by a distinguished Confederate, 'Benjamin on Sales,' written by Judah P. Benjamin."

"Law Notes, a leading American legal periodical, says about Senator

"I BELIEVE PE-RU-NA SAVED MY LIFE."

Mrs. Charles Anspaugh, of Cromwell, Ind., says:

"Peruna has been a godsend to me. I can feel safe in saying that it saved my life, as I was all run down and was just miserable when I commenced taking your Peruna, but am on the road to recovery now. I cannot thank you too much."

Daniel in this connection:

"As every lawyer knows, or, at least, ought to know, Senator Daniel, of Virginia, is the author of a standard work on negotiable instruments, which, by the way, is characterized by about the most elegant literary style to be found in any law books. On one occasion a friend inquired of the Senator how he came to write the book. 'Well,' he replied, 'it was this way: Somebody asked me whether a slight draft bore interest, and I couldn't tell him. I was so ashamed of my ignorance that I determined to master the question at once, and from that time on I got the idea of writing a book on the subject.' 'Well, Senator,' asked the friend, 'does a slight draft bear interest?' Senator Daniel reflected for some moments and then replied 'Blamed if I haven't forgotten!'"

$2,000 WAITING FOR CLAIMANT

Lawyer Seeks Whereabouts of Annie O. Richmond, Who Formerly Lived Here.

FIANCEE ASSERTS CLAIM

Attempts to Collect Insurance in Modern Woodmen of the World.

Where is Annie O. Richmond? All the way from Illinois a man has come to pay over $2,000 to her, but she has not been found so far. She is supposed to have been a resident of this city in 1898, but the old directories do not disclose her name, and no one here who knew her has been discovered by Attorney Clarence S. Townley, of Macomb, Ill., who is here as the representative of the Modern Woodmen of America, ready to pay to her the amount named, which is due her on a policy of insurance in that fraternal organization, taken out by her brother, Frank L. Richmond, said to have been a Virginian.

Beyond the fact that she was named in the policy as the sister of the insured and that her residence was given as Richmond, there is but one other clue to the lost woman. When he died Frank L. Richmond was living in Carthage, Ill. While a resident of that place he had a conversation with a physician of the town while the trial of the murderers of Governor Goebel was in progress in Kentucky. At that time Richmond stated to this physician that his brother-in-law was one of the attorneys involved in the case, presumably on the side of the defense. Nothing has developed out of this clue, but the search in this direction is not yet ended.

Born in Virginia. It was on September 21, 1838, that Frank Richmond took out this policy as a member of the Modern Woodmen of the World at Rose Creek, Minn. He stated in his application for a policy that he was born in Virginia January 26, 1856. Further, he declared that he was unmarried; that by profession he was a printer; that at the time of his application both his father and mother were living, one sixty-eight, the latter sixty-five. He went on to say that he had two brothers, one forty, the other twenty-eight, and that he had five sisters of the ages of forty-two, thirty-eight, thirty-four, thirty and twenty-six, respectively. The physician's certificate declared that Richmond had malarial fever in Havana, Cuba, in 1892.

The physical description of Richmond is meagre. His weight was given as 140 pounds and his height as 5 feet 8 inches. His eyes were gray, he had brown hair, and stood straight, possessing no apparent physical defects. After he left Minnesota, Richmond turned up in Carthage, Ill., still following his trade as a printer, working on a local paper. It was marked during his residence there that he was singularly reticent as to his past and as to his family. He was absolutely silent as to that. He was popular in Carthage, and bore himself, according to the testimony of people who knew him there, "like a gentleman." He died there November 8, 1903.

Another claimant appears. After his death, efforts were made to locate Annie O. Richmond, the sole beneficiary under the policy, but no trace of her could be found. In her place rose up another claimant, a young woman in Carthage, who asserted that Richmond had been engaged to her at the time of his death, and that he had sought to make her change the policy so as to make her the beneficiary. This, however, he did not formally effect, if he attempted it. Feeling that it ought to exhaust every possible clue as to the whereabouts of the beneficiary named in the policy, the Modern Woodmen of America refused to pay the claim of the fiancée. Suit was brought by her against the company, and the case is now pending. It will not be pressed, however, until this search in Virginia has been completed.

Where Annie O. Richmond is or what became of her is yet a mystery. Attorney Townley will be here until tomorrow at the Lexington Hotel, in the hope that some one will come to him there and give him some information as to this mysterious woman. He is representing the Modern Woodmen of America in the matter. He has yet to find here a person who ever heard of this woman, for whom $2,000 is waiting.

LYNCH WILL OFFER NEW TRAFFIC LAW

Regulation of Use of Streets to Be Put in Hands of Police Department.

At the request of Councilman John J. Lynch, City Attorney Pollard is now engaged in drawing a general ordinance governing the use of the public streets of the city by all manner of vehicles, the purpose of the measure being to give the Police Department authority to make regulations for relief of congested districts and otherwise to preserve the safe use of the streets for all proper purposes. Similar ordinances in vogue in other cities have been studied, and if a measure suitable to Richmond's needs can be completed in time it will be introduced by Mr. Lynch on the roll call in the Council Thursday night. It is his hope that the measure can be passed on by the Committee on Ordinance, Charter and Reform in time to come back to the August Council for adoption, as otherwise it might die with this Council and have to be reintroduced after September 1.

There has been some confusion as to the time for holding the adjourned meeting of the Council, which President Peters has ruled will be on Thursday night at 8 o'clock. When the Council was in session last Tuesday night only the report of the Street Committee was passed upon, the bulk of the docket not having been reached at midnight when Mr. Lynch moved to adjourn to Monday night, July 14. Since July 14 is Thursday, and not Monday, the meeting will be held on that date.

The Board of Aldermen meets in regular session Tuesday night. But since the Council transacted little or no business last week, there will be little to come up for concurrence, and another meeting of the Board will be necessary after the Council has completed its monthly docket. In fact, special meetings will be the rule rather than the exception throughout the summer, as there are a number

PLAN STATE RALLY NEXT SEPTEMBER

Board of Travelers' Protective Association Holds Business Session.

The board of directors of the Virginia Division, Travelers' Protective Association, held its first meeting since the recent State convention in Staunton last night at the rooms of Post A. in this city. R. W. Price, of Staunton, the newly elected president of the Virginia Division, was in the chair. C. S. Johnson, a newly elected member of the board of directors, was also present.

The directors decided to hold a Travelers' Protective Association State rally in September, to which a number of the national officers will be invited. The presidents and secretaries of the seven posts in Virginia will be asked to be present. National officers expected to be in Richmond at that time will be President W. O. Hudson, of New Orleans; National Director E. J. Shonecker, Jr., of Milwaukee, and National Director Ashley Miller, formerly of Alexandria, Va., and now of St. Louis, Mo.

The board received notice of the death in St. Louis of Henry T. Kent, former national attorney of the Travelers' Protective Association, a brother of R. M. Kent, of this city.

The board renewed the prize system inaugurated last year, offering four prizes of $50, $25, $15 and $10, respectively, to members bringing in the largest number of new members. A letter was received from Howell C. Featherston, chairman of the legislative committee of the Virginia Division, referring to a number of matters which he expects to put in shape and offer to the next session of the Legislature. Mr. Featherston will be present at a later meeting, when these matters will be discussed in greater detail.
